HAVE RIGHT TO GET TOGETHER

Victory for Union Party in Cumberland Presbyterian Church by Decision of Indiana Judge.

Evansville, Ind., Mar. 9.—Judge Gilechrist, of Vanderburgh superior court, rendered a decision in the Presbyterian church union controversy today, in which the unionist win an overwhelming victory.

The decision was two cases, one from Washington Ind., in which the anti-unionist sue for possession of church property, the other from Vincennes, Ind. in which the unionist ask for injunction to prevent the anti-unionists from interfering with their possession of property.

The issue turned upon the legality of union and constitutional right of the two Presbyterian churches to enter into the union. In an elaborate decision the judge recounts the history of the many Presbyterian unions in the past 200 years, and decided that such uniform action amounts to an adherent constitutional right to form any union that in conformity with their own law.

This he decided has been done in every particular in these two cases.

MAKE THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

The Civic Improvement Club Offers Some Timely Suggestions.

To the Editor of the PRESS-RECORD:

Dear Sir:—Do you not think it would be the proper thing for the people of Marion to unite and have a general spring cleaning? Not, alone, of our own houses and premises, but of the streets and all public places. The filthy appearance of the streets needs no comment.

The women are willing and anxious to help in every possible way in the upbuilding of the town, in fact, have some plans already under way. But what can helpless women do without the advice and assistance of the sterner sex? Very little. We, therefore, appeal to the city council, the judge, the marshal, the Board of Health, the pastors of all the churches, the fathers and mothers, the boys and girls, to every resident without distinction, to join hands in cleaning, beautifying and improving the town. Last, but not least, we ask the RECORD-PRESS to keep the subject before the people.

We ask all this in the name of health, in the name of civic pride and in the name of public opinion.

The anti-spitting ordinance should be explained and enforced. Many do not know the dangers to which we and our children are exposed from the spitum on the streets. One atom of this breathed again into our lungs and tuberculosis follows.

Wire baskets should be placed at the street corners for papers, peelings, etc., and contents burned each day. Let us make a great effort to have Marion the neatest and most attractive town in Western Kentucky. Yours for health and improvement. THE CIVIC IMPROVEMENT CLUB.

OLIVER-PARISH

Wedding Solemnized in this City Wednesday Afternoon

On Wednesday, March 6, 1907, Mr. Elmer E. Parrish and Miss Carrie M. Oliver, of Frances, left on the noon train for Princeton, where they were united in the holy bonds of matrimony at the home of Rev. Chas. S. Gregston.

They were accompanied to that place by Misses Sudie Oliver, Grace Yandell, Nola Parrish and Messrs. Herschel Butler, Charley Mayes and Ralph Hodge.

An elegant dinner was served at the Gregston residence and at 1:30 o'clock a large crowd gathered in the parlors and the ceremony was performed.

The bride is the beautiful little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Oliver and is one of the county's best teachers.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Parrish and is a prosperous young business man.

While mere children their friendship ripened into an undying love. The parties returned to their homes, except the bride and groom, who left for Crofton to visit relatives. As they were leaving their friends showered them with rice.

Mr. Elmer E. Parrish and Miss Carrie Mae Oliver, of Crittenden county, were married in this city Wednesday afternoon. The ceremony took place in west Princeton at the home of the officiating clergyman, Rev. Chas. Gregston. The young couple were accompanied to Princeton on the 12:10 train from Evansville by Misses Nola Parrish, Grace Yandell and Susie Oliver, Messrs. Mayes Hodges and Butler.

On their arrival the young people went to the home of Rev. Charles Gregston, where an elegant dinner was served. After the ceremony, the party of young people accompanying the contracting parties returned to their respective homes in Crittenden county, while Mr. and Mrs. Parrish took the 5:10 train for Crofton, where after a short visit to relatives, they will return to their home in Crittenden county near Frances.

Mrs. Parrish, the bride, is a beautiful and attractive young lady and the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forest Oliver, of Frances.

Mr. Parrish, the groom, is an excellent young man, being the youngest son of Geo. Parrish, a prominent and prosperous farmer, of the Caldwell Springs community in Crittenden county. He is well known throughout this section of the state as a prominent stock dealer.—Princeton Leader.

Dave Kevill's Mill.

The Dawson Milling Co., of this place, is doing an immense business now, as they are running the capacity of their mill. We hear the whistle blow almost every day, and makes us glad to know that this company is doing an increased business. There is a large demand for their products, as they sell to a large territory, and do a large amount of custom grinding. When you want a good home product, ask your merchant for a sack of "Cream of Wheat," "patent" or "Belle of Dawson," straight.

The Dawson Milling Co., have secured R. L. Owen, an expert miller, of Utica, who will take charge of the milling department of the flour mill at once.—Dawson Grit.

Arkansas Letter

Piggatt, Ark., Feb. 24, 1907.

EDITORS RECORD-PRESS:—If you will allow me a little space in the dear old paper I enjoy reading so much I will spend a few moments this beautiful Sabbath morning in writing a few lines to let my dear friends know how I am getting along in the sunny land of Arkansas.

We have been having some real fine weather down here up till last Saturday it rained all day and froze causing damage to timber and orchards and it is feared that all the fruit is killed. Farmers have been farming here to some extent, such as sowing oats, planting potatoes and other early crops, but yesterday's hard rain will somewhat delay plowing for a few days.

Of course this is not my first trip here as I spent the years of 1903 and 1904 at this same place and I am proud to say the longer I stay the better I like, and think it is the best place I have found outside of the boundaries of the dear old state I love so well, the place where I first saw the light. My mind often wanders back to that dear old place and I often think of the lovely spots where I spent my boyhood days and the many happy times I have had with the boys. A great many of them now, like myself, have wandered from their dear old home and loving parents that await their home coming with aching hearts and welcome hands, who every night before going to bed, goes down upon their knees and offer up a prayer for the welfare and safe keeping of their sons who are rounding in a far away land. And boys, who are at home, that have never had any experience in rambling, let me say to you that when you leave that dear old father and mother of yours, you have forsaken the two best friends you ever had or ever will find and you will learn this to be a fact when you once leave and have to encounter the hardships among strangers and in a strange land. No matter if your home is a poor one it is a sweet home and a happy one if you strive to make it so. Go where you may you will sure fail to find that tender loving mother that watches and prays over you night and day.

So hoping to hear from some of my old friends will close by saying that I will write again giving a full description of this country if this finds room in the columns of the dear old PRESS. Wishing good luck to you, Mr. Editors, I am as ever,

JOHN E. ROBERTS.

Marion High School up to The Standard.

Dr. Geo. J. Ramsey, field-secretary for Central University, visited Marion High School last week. Recently Central University has set up the highest entrance requirements of any college in the state. Dr. Ramsey says he finds many high schools of Western Ky., which do not come up to their standard, which is strictly on a par with that of colleges in the east. It is a source of much pride, that Marion High Schools was placed on Central's accredited list and a scholarship will be given each year to that young man whose average scholarship is highest. This is a signal honor for M. H. S. considering the fact that the principle has no regular High School Assistant.

Neglected Colds Threaten Life

"Don't trifle with a cold," is good advice for prudent men and women. It may be vital in the case of a child. Proper food, good ventilation, and dry, warm clothing are the proper safeguards against colds. If they are maintained through the changeable weather of autumn, winter and spring, the chances of a surprise from ordinary colds will be slight. But the ordinary light cold will become severe if neglected, and a well established ripe cold is to the germs of diphtheria what honey is to the bee. The greatest menace to child life at this season of year is the neglected cold. Whether it is a child or adult, the cold slight or severe, the very best treatment that can be adopted is to give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is safe and sure. The great popularity and immense sale of this preparation has been attained by its remarkable cures of this ailment. A cold never results in pneumonia when it is given. For sale by Haynes & Taylor.

Do not Crowd The Season

The first warm days of spring bring with them a desire to get out and enjoy the exhilarating air and sunshine. Children that have been housed up all winter are brought out and you wonder where they all came from. The heavy winter clothing is thrown aside and many shed their fannels. Then a cold wave comes and people say that spring is evidence. Colds at this season are even more dangerous than in mid-winter, as there is much more danger of pneumonia. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, however, and you will have nothing to fear. It always cures, and we have never known a cold to result in pneumonia where it was used. It is pleasant and safe to take. Children like it. For sale by J. H. Orme the leading druggist in western Ky.

Prompt Payment the Best Argument

R. L. Flanary, of Marion, district agent of Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co., was in Dixon Wednesday to pay to T. H. Shoulders, Admr. the Noah H. Skinner claim of $1000, insurance that said Skinner held in that company. Mr. Flanary informs us that Mr. Skinner held this policy only about six days, and had never paid the first premium.

When taking the insurance, Skinner gave his note for the first premium. In the application for this insurance, Mr. Skinner gave his occupation as farming, but in less than one week for the delivery of the policy he was killed in the coal mines at Wheatcroft. Notwithstanding this the company has paid the full face of the policy without deducting the premium.

Mr. Flanary also showed us a check for $1000 payable to Mrs. Sue M. Seatz, widow of J. F. Seatz, who died at Clay on Feb. 28th. Mr. Seatz had only paid one premium on this policy.

This is certainly a good showing for Mr. Flanary's company. Nothing speaks louder and more forcibly for an insurance company than the fact that They Pay All Claims Promptly.—Dixon Journal.

Returns Home

Wednesday's Evansville Courier says: "Mrs. Thomas Blackwell, of St. Louis, Mo., was in the city Tuesday enroute home from Caseyville, where she had accompanied the remains of her cousin, Miss Mary Ann Casey, whose death took place in St. Louis, Mo., during last week. Much of romantic interest has been associated with the life of the deceased, who had attained the phenomenal age of 97, and who had been a personage of some historic note, being the daughter of the noted Sam Casey, treasurer of the United States in three administrations, those of Presidents Pierce, Taylor and Buchanan. A famous belle and beauty of the nation's capital at that time, she was said to have numbered among her suitors President Buchanan himself.

Miss Casey, who had in later years resided in St. Louis, Mo., with Mrs. Blackwell, was also a cousin of Mrs. William Hardigg, of this city, who, with Mr. Hardigg, attended the funeral, which took place at the family burial ground of the Casey's near the town of Caseyville, which was founded by her ancestors in the pioneer period of Kentucky history."

Rheumatic Pains Relieved

H. F. Crocker, Esq., now 48 years of age, and for twenty years Justice of the peace at Martinsburg, Iowa, says: "I am terribly afflicted with sciatic rheumatism in my left arm and right hip. I have used three bottles of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it did me lots of good. For sale by J. H. Orme the leading druggist in western Ky."

G. B. Burhans Testifies After Four Years

G. B. Burhans, of Carlisle Center, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I wrote you stating that I had been entirely cured of a severe kidney trouble by taking less than two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure. It entirely stopped the brick dust sediment, and pain and symptoms of kidney disease disappeared. I am glad to say that I have never had a return of any of these symptoms during the four years that have elapsed and I am evidently cured to stay, cured, and heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Cure to any one suffering from kidney or bladder trouble." OLD TIME PUNISHMENTS.

Cold Water Baths Helped to Cure Swearing and Scolding.

To punish a child in such a way that it will see the direct connection between the correction and the fault is one of the precepts of modern education. The judge of the eighteenth century was not worried by such psychological theories, but his decisions often had the grim humor of fitness.

What could be better for the scold than a cooling plunge or for the wife heater than a few lashes on his own back?

A number of tender hearted English galleons joined a pioneer expedition to Virginia. The weather was cold and the work hard. When those soft muscled young men were set at chopping trees their hands were sorely blistered by the ax helves. With the cries of pain many oaths were heard.

The president of the company soon put a stop to this swearing by ordering a can of cold water to be poured down the sleeve of the guilty one at every oath he uttered.

In colonial days hog stealing was considered one of the most serious of crimes. At the first offense the thief's ears were slit, at the second his ears were nailed to a pillory, and at the third he suffered death "without benefit of clergy."

Deceitful bakers and careless fish dealers had to "lose their ears," while he who spoke detracting words had his tongue bored by a bodkin.

A Frenchman, traveling in America in 1700, describes the ducking stool as a "pleasant mode" of punishing a scolding woman.

In 1635 Thomas Hartley of Virginia wrote of his witnessing the execution of a ducking stool sentence:

"Day before yesterday at 2 of ye Clock, I saw this punishment given to one Betsey Walker, who by ye violence of her tongue made her home and her neighborhood uncomfortable. They had a machine for ye purpose, yt belongs to ye Parish. It has already been used three times this summer.

"Ye Woman was allowed to go under ye water for ye space of 15 minutes. Betsey had a stout stomach and would not yield until she had been under five times. Then she cried piteously. Then they drew back ye Machine, untied ye Ropes and let her walk home a hopefully penitent woman."—Youth's Companion.

BUSINESS PROVERBS.

Not the big earner, but the wise investor, is the future capitalist.

The wise man knows that wealth is not worth getting save for the purpose of using and so gets after it early.

Investment is putting money into chicken farming; speculation is counting the chickens before they are hatched.

The chap who does his work indifferently because he thinks he is above his job thereby proves his unfitness for the job that is above him.

The man who yields to honest persuasion slowly and imperceptibly, as rock to water, may make a loyal investor when won. But he who is quick to lay hold of a good investment makes the most money.

Multitudes of people sleep soundly nights, believing their savings to be protected in the banks, not dreaming that the banks have invested them in business enterprises that the depositors themselves declined to buy shares in because they thought their earnings were too large to be safe.—Cent Per Cent.

Willing to Chance It.

It is reported of the Earl of Mansfield that he once dismissed a servant, but wrote for him a "character," as follows: "The bearer, John —, has served me for three years in the capacity of coachman. He is an able driver and a very sober man. I discharged him because he cheated me." A day or two later the man returned to thank his old master for the help he had afforded him in getting him a new birth. How had the testimonial helped him? The man explained that his new master had observed that ability to drive and sobriety were the qualities required in a coachman. As for the cheating, his employer had said, "I'm a Yorkshireman, and I'll be hanged if you cheat me."

The English of It.

An English actor of some prominence was dining with some friends in this country. One of them asked him if he had found any American plays that he thought he could use in England. "Oh, yes," he replied, "I have seen one or two that I fawney will be on the other side. In fact, I have entered into negotiations for several. One that appeals to me strongly is a play called 'Ten Evenings in a Public House,' where I shall play John Morgan, and another is named 'Uncle Thomas' Residence,' which has a fine part for me in Marks, the barrister."—Kansas City Star.

Papa's Fault.

Father—I have just heard that that incorrigible son of mine has just married a well known actress. Daughter—Well, you have yourself to blame, father. Father—How do you make that out? Daughter—Haven't you often told him to hitch his wagon to a star?—Young's Magazine.

Bunkoed.

The elephant trumpeted loudly. "What's the trouble?" asked the chimpanzee. "Somebody's worked the shell game on me," replied the pachyderm as he threw away the bag of empty peanut shells which had just been handed to him.

The Wise Old Parrot.

"Talk about the instinct of the lower orders! I built a little two-story house for my parrot not long ago, and the very next morning after I put her in it she looked out of the window and greeted me in a very profane fashion. 'Why should she do that?' 'Complaining about the house,' I fawney. 'But why should she swear at you?' 'Took me for the janitor, no doubt.'"

Safe, Sure and Speedy.

No external remedy ever yet devised has so fully and unquestionably met these three prime conditions as successful as Alcock's Plasters. They are safe because they contain no deleterious drug and are manufactured upon scientific principals of medicine. They are sure because nothing goes into them except ingredients which are exactly adapted to the purposes for which a plaster is required. They are speedy in their action because their medicinal qualities goes right to their work relieving pain and restoring the natural and healthy performance of functions of muscles, nerves and skin. Alcock's Plaster are the original and genuine porous plasters and like most meritorious articles have been extensively imitated, therefore always make sure and get the genuine Alcock's.

Skim Milk as a Fertilizer.

Skim milk as a fertilizer for crops is interesting many farmers abroad, several of whom declare that astonishing results have come from its use. In the vicinity of one farm a dairy had a lot of skim milk that could not be used. Two farmers took the milk and poured it on their lands as an experiment. One emptied seventy-five cans and another 150. Remarkable results have been obtained. Their grass is now seven times as vigorous as on adjoining fields where the milk was not used, but which were covered with commercial fertilizers.

Soda Water ...Sal...

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

Copyright, 1960, by Frank H. Spearman

WHEN the great engine which we called the Skyscraper came out of the Zanesville shops, she was rebuilt from pilot to tender. Our master mechanic, Neighbor, had an idea, after her terrific collision, that she could not stand heavy main line passenger runs, so he put her on the Acton cut off. It was what railroad men call a jerk water run, whatever that may be, a little jaunt of ten miles across the divide connecting the northern division with the Denver section. It was just about like running a trolley, and the run was given to Dad Sinclair, for after that lift at Oxford his back was never strong enough to shovel coal, and he had to take an engine or quit railroading.

Thus it happened that after many years he took the throttle once more and ran over, twice a day, as he does yet, from Acton to Willow Creek.

The boy, George Sinclair, the kid engineer, took the run on the drier opposite Foley just as soon as he got well.

George, who was never happy unless he had eight or ten Pullmans behind him and the right of way over everything between Omaha and Denver, made great sport of his father's little smoking car and day coach behind the big engine.

Foley made sport of the remodeled engine. He used to stand by while the old engineer was oiling and ask him whether he thought she could catch a jack rabbit. "I mean," Foley would say, "if the rabbit was feeling well."

Dad Sinclair took it all grimly and quietly. He had railroaded too long to care for anybody's chaff. But one day, after the skyscraper had got her fuses pretty well chalked up with alkali, Foley insisted that she must be renamed.

"I have the only genuine skyscraper on the West End myself," declared Foley. He did have a new Class II engine, and she was awe inspiring, in truth. "I don't propose," he continued, "to have her confused with your old tub any longer, Dad."

Dad, oiling his old tub affectionately, answered never a word.

"She's full of soda, isn't she, father?" asked George, standing by.

"Rocken she is, son."

"Full of water, I suppose?"

"Try to keep her that way, son."

"Sal Soda, isn't it, Dad?"

"Now, I can't say. As to that I can't say."

"We'll call her Sal Soda, George," suggested Foley.

"No," interposed George. "Stop a bit. I have it. Not Sal Soda at all. Make it Soda Water Sal."

Then they laughed uproariously, and in the teeth of Dad Sinclair's protests—for he objected at once and vigorously—the queer name stuck to the engine, and sticks yet.

To have seen the great hulking machine you would never have suspected there could be another story left in her. Yet one there was—a story of the wind. As she stood, too, when old man Sinclair took her on the Acton run, she was the best illustration I have ever seen of the adage that one can never tell from the looks of a frog how far it will jump.

Have you ever felt the wind? Not I think, unless you have lived on the seas or on the plains. People everywhere think the wind blows, but it really blows only on the ocean and on the prairies.

The summer that Dad took the Acton run it blew for a month steadily all of one August—hot, dry, merciless, the despair of the farmer and the terror of trainmen.

It was on an August evening, with the gale still sweeping up from the southwest, that Dad came lumbering into Acton with his little trolley train. He had barely pulled up at the platform to unload his passengers when the station agent, Morris Reynolds, countless and hatless, rushed up to the engine ahead of the hostler and sprang into the cab. Reynolds was one of the quietest fellows in the service. To see him without coat or hat didn't count for much in such weather, but to see him sallow with fright and almost speechless was enough to stir even old Dad Sinclair.

It was not Dad's habit to ask questions, but he looked at the man in questioning amazement. Reynolds choked and caught at his breath as he seized the engineer's arm and pointed down the line.

"Dad," he gasped, "three cars of coal standing over there on the second spur blew loose a few minutes ago!"

"Where are they?"

"Where are they? Blown through the switch and down the line forty miles an hour."

The old man grasped the frightened man by the shoulder. "What do you mean? How long ago? When is it due? Talk quick, man! What's the matter with you?"

"Not five minutes ago. No. 1 is due here in less than thirty minutes. They'll go into her sure, Dad," cried Reynolds, all in a fright, "what'll I do? For heaven's sake, do something! I called up Riverton and tried to catch 1, but she'd passed. I was too late. There'll be a wreck, and I'm booked for the penitentiary. What can I do?"

All the while the station agent, panic stricken, rattled on Sinclair was looking at his watch, casting it up, chortling it all under his thick, gray, grizzled wool, fast as thought could compass.

No. 1 headed for Acton, and her pace was a hustle every mile of the way—three cars of coal bowling down on her, how fast he dared not think, and through it all he was asking himself what day it was. Thursday? Up! Yes, George, his boy, was on the drier No. 1. It was his day up. If they met on a curve—

"Uncouple her!" roared Dad Sinclair in a giant tone.

"What are you going to do?"

"Burns," thundered Dad to his fireman, "give her steam, and quick, boy! Dump in grease, waste, oil, everything! Are you clear there?" he cried, opening the throttle as he looked back.

The old engine, pulling clear of her coaches, quivered as she gathered herself under the steam. She leaped ahead with a swish. The drivers churned in the sand, bit into it with gritting tires and forged ahead with a suck and a hiss and a roar. Before Reynolds had fairly gathered his wits Sinclair, leaving his train on the main track in front of the depot, was clattering over the switch after the runaways. The wind was a terror, and they had too good a start. But the way Soda Water Sal took the gait when she once felt her feet under her made the wrinkled engineer at her throttle set his mouth with the grimness of a gamster. It meant the runaways—and catch them—or the ditch for Soda Water Sal, and the throbbing old machine seemed to know it, for her nose hung to the steel like the snout of a pointer.

He was a man of a hundred even then—Burns—but nobody knew it then. We hadn't thought much about Burns before. He was a tall, lank Irish boy, with an open face and a morning smile. Dad Sinclair took him on because nobody else would have him. Burns was so green that Foley said you couldn't set his name after. He would, so Foley said, put out a hot box just by blinking at it.

But every man's turn comes once, and it had come to Burns. It was Dick Burns' chance now to show what manner of stuff was bred in his long Irish bones. It was his task to make the steam—if he could—faster than Dad Sinclair could burn it. What use to grip the throttle and scheme if Burns didn't furnish the power, put the life into her heels as she raced the wind—the merciless, restless gale sweeping over the prairie faster than horse could fly before it?

Working smoothly and swiftly into a dizzy whirl, the monstrous drivers took the steel in leaps and bounds. Dad Sinclair, leaning from the cab window, glancingly watched their gathering speed, pulled the bar up notch after notch, and fed Burns' fire into the old engine's arteries fast and faster than she could throw it into her steel hoofs.

That was the night the West End knew that a greenhorn had cast his chrysalis and stood out a man—knowing that the honor roll of our frontier division wanted one more name, and that it was big Dick Burns. Sinclair hung silently desperate to the throttle, his eyes straining into the night ahead, and the face of the long Irish boy, streaked with soot and channeled with sweat, lit every minute with the glare of the furnace as he fed the white hot blast that leaped and curled and foamed under the crown sheet of Soda Water Sal.

There he stooped and sweat and swung as she slowed and lurched and jerked across the fish plates. Carefully, nursingly, ceaselessly he pushed the steam pointer higher, higher, higher on the dial—and that despite the tremendous drafts of Dad's throttle.

Never a glance to the right or the left, to the track or the engine. From the freight cars he kept his eyes on the engine, and the engine on the freight cars.

While the plucky fireman crept along the top of the freight cars to keep from being blown bodily through the air, Sinclair, with every resource that brain and nerve and power could exert, was struggling to overcome the terrible headway of pursuer and pursued, driving now fearfully into the beam of headlights of No. 1.

With the Johnson bar over and the drivers dancing a gallop backward, with the sand striking fire and the rails burning under it; with the old skyscraper shivering again in a terrific struggle and Burns twisting the heads off the brake rods; with every trick of old Sinclair's cunning and his boy duplicating every one of them in the cab of No. 1—still they came together. It was too fearful a momentum to overcome, when minutes mean miles and tons are reckoned by thousands.

They came together, but instead of an appalling wreck, destruction and death it was only a bump. No. 1 had the speed when they met, and it was a car of coal dumped a bit sudden and a nose on George's engine like a full-back's after a center rush. The pilot doubled back into the ponies, and the headlight was scoured with nut, put and slack, but the stack was hardly bruised.

The minute they struck George Sinclair, making fast and leaping from his cab, ran forward in the dark, panting with rage and excitement. Burns, torch in hand, was himself just jumping down to get forward. His face wore its usual grin, even when George assailed him with a torrent of abuse.

"What do you mean, you red headed lubber?" he shouted, with much the lungs of his father. "What are you doing switching coal here on the main line?"

In fact, George called the astonished fireman everything he could think of until his father, who was blundering forward on his side of the engine, hearing the voice, turned and ran around behind the tender to take a hand himself.

"Mean?" he roared above the blow of his safety. "Mean?" he bellowed in the teeth of the wind. "Mean? Why, you impudent, empty headed, ungrateful rapscallion, what do you mean coming around here to abuse a man that's saved you and your train from the scrap?"

And big Dick Burns, standing by with his torch, burst into an Irish laugh, fairly doubled up before the nonplussed boy and listened with great relish to the excited father and excited son. It was not hard to understand George's amazement and anger at finding Soda Water Sal behind three cars of coal halfway between stations on the main line and on his time—and that the fastest time on the division. But what amused Burns most was to see the imperturbable old Dad pitching into his boy with as much spirit as the young man himself showed.

It was because both men were scared out of their wits; scared over their narrow escape from a frightful wreck; from having each killed the other, maybe—the son the father, and the father the son.

For brave men do get scared. Don't believe anything else. But between no one ever knew; neither old man Sinclair nor Dick Burns ever cared. Only, the crew of a freight, side tracking for the approaching flier, saw an engine flying light; knew the hunter and the quarry, for they had seen the runaways shoot by—saw then, a minute after, a star and a streak and a trail of rotten smoke fly down the wind, and she had come and passed and gone.

It was just east of that siding, so Burns and Sinclair always maintained, but it measured 10,000 feet east, that they caught them.

A shout from Dad brought the dripping fireman up standing, and, looking ahead, he saw in the blaze of their own headlight the string of coaches standing still ahead of them—so it seemed to him—their own speed was so great, and the runaways were almost equaling it. They were making forty miles an hour when they dashed past the paralyzed freight crew.

Without waiting for orders—what orders did such a man need?—without a word Burns crawled out of his window with a pin and ran forward on the footboard, clinging the best he could as the engine dipped and lurched, climbed down on the cowlcatcher and lifted the pilot bar to couple. It was a crazy thing to attempt. He was much likelier to get under the pilot than to succeed, yet he tried it.

Then it was that the fine hand of Dad Sinclair came into play. To temper the speed enough, and just enough, to push her nose just enough and far enough for Burns to make the draw bar of the runaway—that was the nicety of the big seamed hands on the throttle and on the air, the very magic of touch which on a slender bar of steel could push a hundred tons of flying metal up and hold it steady in a play of six inches on the teeth of the gale that tore down behind him.

Again and again Burns tried to couple and failed. Sinclair, straining anxiously ahead, caught sight of the headlight of No. 1 rounding O'Fallon's bluffs.

He cried to Burns, and, incredible though it seems, the fireman heard. Above all the infernal din, the tearing of the flanges and the roaring of the wind Burns heard the cry. It nerved him to a supreme effort. He slipped the eye once more into the draw and managed to drop his pin. Up went his hand in signal.

Choking the steam, Sinclair threw the brake shoes clamping against the big drivers. The sand poured on the rails, and with Burns up on the cowlcatcher setting brakes the three great runaways were brought to with a jerk that would have astounded the most reckless seneschales in the world.

While the plucky fireman crept along the top of the freight cars to keep from being blown bodily through the air, Sinclair, with every resource that brain and nerve and power could exert, was struggling to overcome the terrible headway of pursuer and pursued, driving now fearfully into the beam of headlights of No. 1.

It was because both men were scared out of their wits; scared over their narrow escape from a frightful wreck; from having each killed the other, maybe—the son the father, and the father the son.

For brave men do get scared. Don't believe anything else. But between the fright of a coward and the fright of a brave man there is this difference—the coward's scare is apparent before the danger, that of the brave man after it has passed, and Burns laughed with a tremendous mirth "at th' two o' thim ajawlu!" as he expressed it.

No man on the West End could turn on his pins quicker than George Sinclair, though, if his hastiness misled him. When it all came clear he climbed into the old cab—the cab he himself had once gone against death in—and with stumbling words tried to thank the tall Irishman, who still laughed in the excitement of having won.

And when Neighbor next day, thoughtful and tactful, heard it all, he very carefully looked Soda Water Sal all over again.

"Dad," said he, when the boys got through telling it for the last time, "she's a better machine than I thought she was."

"There isn't a better pulling your coaches," maintained Dad Sinclair stoutly.

"I'll put her on the main line, Dad, and give you the 168 for the cut off. Huh?"

"The 168 will suit me, Neighbor. Any old tub—eh, Foley?" said Dad, turning to the cheeky engineer, who had come up in time to hear most of the talk. The old fellow had not forgotten Foley's sneer at Soda Water Sal when he rechristened her. But Foley, too, had changed his mind and was ready to give in.

"That's quite right, Dad," he acknowledged. "You can get more out of any old tub on the division than the rest of us fellows can get out of a Baldwin consolidated. I mean it too. It's the best thing I ever heard of. What are you going to do for Burns, Neighbor?" asked Foley, with his usual assurance.

"I was thinking I would give him Soda Water Sal and put him on the right side of the cal for a freight run. I reckon he earned it last night."

In a few minutes Foley started off to hunt up Burns.

"See here, Irish," said he in his off hand way, "next time you catch a string of runaways just remember to climb up the ladder and set your brakes before you couple. It will save a good deal of wear and tear on the pilot bar, see? I hear you're going to get a run. Don't fall out the window when you get over on the right."

And that's how Burns was made an engineer and how Soda Water Sal was rescued from the disgrace of running on the trolley.

AN OLD GERMAN LEGEND.

The Skull With the Nail Driven Through Its Temple.

At Freiburg, Baden, in front of an old chapel rich in medieval painting depicting the rewards of virtue and the wages of sin, stands a great cross, at its foot a skull with a nail driven into the temple.

A shoemaker of Freiburg, according to tradition, died suddenly in the good old days before coroners and juries were too inquisitive and was buried near where the cross stands. Scarcely had the earth upon his grave been wet by the rains before his wife took a second husband.

Neighbors talked, but that was all. One night the priest of the parish awoke to find standing at the foot of his bed the ghost of the dead shoemaker. The ghastly figure raised a gory lock from its forehead and pointed to a nail driven in the temple.

The body was exhumed, and there was the evidence of the crime just as the specter had indicated. The wife confessed the murder and was executed. But the skull was placed at the foot of the cross as a warning.

"The effect was most wholesome," relates the truthful chronicler, "for since then not a wife of Freiburg has murdered her husband."

REVERSED BY THE PEOPLE.

English Voters Call a Halt as to Municipal Ownership.

The most dramatic incident in the history of municipal government occurred on Nov. 1, when the greatest city in the world reversed its policy in regard to municipal ownership by an overwhelming vote. For several years the "Progressives," as the municipal ownership party called itself, have controlled the London county council, which has charge of most matters affecting the city as a whole, and of seventeen of the twenty-eight borough councils, which deal with local matters, one borough being nonpartisan. After the borough council election on Nov. 1 this party was left in control of but two boroughs, having elected with their allies, the so-called "Laborites," only 232 councilmen out of 1,302. That it was a popular and not a class victory is shown by the fact that the "Progressives" were beaten worst in the boroughs where the heaviest vote was cast.

Such a political upheaval must have an adequate cause, and the cause in the case was the rapid increase in taxes, and consequently rents, which resulted from the taking over by the city or its boroughs of tramways, electric lighting, waterworks, etc., the building of luxurious public baths and other expenditures of public money out of all proportion to the results attained. This lavishness had raised the borough tax rate in the boroughs controlled by the "Progressives" 40 per cent above the rate in the other boroughs. A few examples of the losses incurred may be of interest.

In Islington the street lighting costs nearly three times as much per mile as in the boroughs lighted by private companies. In St. Pancras the cost is nearly as high, while in Woolwich, in spite of the high cost, the loss for the current year is expected to reach $50,000. In Bernoldsey and Southwark the council has refused an offer from a private company to light the streets at half the cost under municipal management. The same condition exists in commercial lighting, for the Aerated Bread company found that the bills for its depots in municipally lighted boroughs were 115 per cent higher than the rate paid to private companies.

In Shoreditch the palatial public baths, built within a stone's throw of baths erected by a local philanthropist, are now closed for lack of custom, though interest must still be paid on the investment and the borough has lost the taxes previously paid by the property. And in Poplar each bath taken in the public baths costs the taxpayers 20 cents in addition to what the bather pays for his ticket.

In this borough cases were proved in which outdoor relief was given to families earning $500 a year, equivalent to $850 in this country, while the fare in the workhouse was better than could be afforded by the average independent wage earner.

Examples of this sort could be multiplied indefinitely, and the same conditions exist in the work carried on by the London county council, which, for example, is paying 47 per cent more for inferior brickwork than the standard contract price for the best work. The failure of its municipal ferry is typical of its waste of public money, and the county council election to be held next spring is expected to result similarly to the borough council election.

The Pall Mall Gazette sums the situation up by saying: "You may confiscate capital, but you cannot confiscate that mighty force of self interest which belongs to the great generating station of all human activity. Municipal trading, conducted by amateurs and financed out of an open and bottomless pocket, can never be more than a weak and false imitation of real commerce and industry. If the city council collected its capital by the issue of prospectuses to the public, who would invest a sovereign on the faith of its promises or the reputation of its directing committees? And if the ratepayer is wise he will take care that his money does not find its way by compulsion into speculations where he most assuredly would never place it by choice."

Taxes Rising in Scotland.

Consul Rufus Fleming of Edinburgh calls attention in a recent report to the fact that during the ten years ending 1904 local taxation per capita has increased more than 42 per cent. He further states that taxes are especially high in Glasgow, Aberdeen and Paisley, the three Scotch cities that have gone deepest into municipal ownership, and adds that "the conclusion seems unavoidable that, whatever benefits municipal ownership may have bestowed upon the masses, it has not tended to lighten the burdens of taxpayers." This is emphasized by the added fact that during the last fiscal year of the series the running expenses of all of the revenue producing municipal undertakings of Scotland exceeded the receipts by 10 per cent in spite of the ridiculously small depreciation allowance and the transferring to other accounts of large items of expense.

Want to Let Go, but Can't.

Do you remember how you felt the first time you took hold of an electric battery? It felt rather pleasant at first, but as the operator turned on more current it became very unpleasant, and you wanted to let go, but couldn't. That's the way most citizens feel in places where the city does its own lighting. They've got hold of an electric plant and want to let go, but can't.

Bonds for municipal plants increase taxes. Taxes increase the cost of living and of doing business.

WHEN THE

It's agin' all laws o' fishin' an' fermin' th' book o' rules; Scientific anglers scorn it as the instrument o' fools! But, darn me, I jist like it, spite o' that there city snob— For there's nothin' like a bobber, An' I love a bob!

When th' sun is risin' yell'er an' th' birds is wakin' up, Fillin' all th' world with singin', fillin' full joy's brimmin' cup— Then I sort er git excited with my hick'ry pole an' cob An' I tickle in my denims When I see the bob—

Ain't no use fer fancy tackle, bristol rod, 'er whirr'n reel Gittin' tangled like ol' whiskey makes a feller's brain cells feel— But, gee whillikens, I'm happy with th' risin' o' the sun When th' bobber gits to bobbin' And the string—

First she trembles on th' water an' th' circles broaden wide, Ripplin' inter baby billers, sputtin' onward with th' tide; Then she jumps like all creation, does that jiggin', teet'rin' cob, Gittin' me all flushed an' flutt'rin' Count o' that there bin' bob!

An' when night comes I turn homeward, loaded down with string o' fish, Sprisin' all them city fellers—causin' them t' wish and wish They had thrun away ther rigg'n, reel an' all—an' smoked a cob, Fishin' like a "native" fishes With a stick pole an' a bob!

THE SNOW MAN'S ROMANCE

A snow man made love to a pretty snow drift
Way down in the orchard where all was quite still
He stretched forth his arms in a pleading of love,
But this little snow drift was haughty and chill
The snow man loved on in his own patient way
Until the cold snow drift was softened and won
Then, suddenly, burst through the dark clouds o'erhead
A heat that was called by the South Wind the Sun
It melted the man that was moulded of snow,
It thawed all the pretty snow drift in a day
And gladly their lives did the two lovers join
To sing in a river, forever, away!

By The Old Road Bridge

There's a heap o' joy in a linen string an' a bamboo pole an' bait On the bayou bank by th' old-road bridge, when th' day is gittin' late!

No, it ain't so much that th' big fish bite er th' shiners jerk th' line. But there's heaven there in th' eventide, an' a quaff o' sunset wine!

Then th' golden glow o' th' painted west is a deep'nin' fast to red! An' th' chirpin' birds say their sweet good night as they flutter off to bed!

List th' low of cows, an' the whistling boy as he plods behind th' herd! Ah! there's peace an' rest in th' twilight time when th' leaves are scarcely stirred!

An' it's wuth yer while t' be livin' then, jest to sort o' dream and wait On th' bayou bank by th' old-road bridge, when th' day is gittin' late!

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure—and has been for 20 years. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package.

For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison-marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with our children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison-marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simple refuse to accept any other. Sold by Haynes & Taylor.

Caution

Imitations have been placed upon the market so closely resembling Alcock's Plasters in general appearance as to be well calculated to deceive. It is however, in general appearance only that they compare with Alcock's, for they are not only lacking in the best elements which have made Alcock's so efficient, but are often harmful in their effects. Remember that Alcock's are the original and only genuine porous plasters—the best external remedy known—and when purchasing plasters the only safe way is to always insist upon having Alcock's.

EFFECT OF THE FOOD LAW

Driving Many Worthless Catarrh Medicines Out of Existence

Many worthless remedies that have been advertised for the cure of catarrh have been driven out of existence by the Pure Food Law

This has naturally increased the sale of reliable remedies, and those that fulfill the provision of the law. Hyomei, for example, has a larger sale than before, and Haynes & Taylor still sell it under guarantee that it will cure catarrh or the money will be refunded.

Breath Hyomei three or four times daily thru the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, and its healing air will reach the most remote parts of the nose, throat and lungs, killing all catarrhal germs and soothing and healing any irritation in the mucous membrane.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs $1.00, extra bottles, if needed, 50c, and sold by Haynes & Taylor under the guarantee that it will cure or cost nothing.

Situations Guaranteed

Do not be discouraged by the fact that you are not a student in order to get the best position. School of merit do not resort to such dishonest practices.

Fast students "guarantee" situations in order to secure students, because they have no other inducements to offer.

Our work is so thorough that a guarantee is superfluous. Business men are so eager to get competent help here that a large percentage of our students take positions before they graduate.

See us before making arrangements for your business and shorthand education at some interior, fake school. We will take pleasure in telling you all about the particulars in the "position guarantees" of dishonest schools. Catalogue free.
